The Daily Quote

"In a memorandum sent to House Republicans on Thursday, Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy (Calif.) promised a 'busy September.' The GOP, he wrote, will bundle together and pass again a series of bills that the House approved earlier but that never made headway in the Senate. Repackaging and restamping defunct bills doesn't sound like much work to us. And Republicans don't have to worry about the Senate sending any of the bundles back for final consultations before they go to the president's desk. They contain so many proposals that are both unwise and toxic to Democrats, such as blocking environmental regulations, that the Senate will dismiss them for what they are: measures meant to make Republicans appear as though they are advancing a conservative agenda when, in fact, they are advancing nothing at all."
