TOMORROW'S OUTLOOK

The GOP Leadership has announced the following schedule for Tuesday, December 4: The House will meet at 12:00 p.m. for legislative business. The House is expected to consider several bills under suspension of the Rules.

The Daily Quote

"Between the White House congressional ball and an adjournment planned for Wednesday afternoon, this week will be short and notable not for what's on the House and Senate calendars, but what's not... And it's not just a bill on the fiscal cliff that is lacking from next week's calendar. There's also still no mention of a farm bill, something House leadership said they would take up after the November elections. If nothing is done before January first, wholesale milk prices will double."
